

Small Margins Are Possible In Homes Due To High Prices

That families have little opportunity to save with foodstuffs and necessities of living at top-notch figures and that families earning incomes between $1,500 and $2,500 are not making money either here or there, are two facts disclosed among many others in the first report issued by the department of labor as the result of a survey taken a few months ago in Memphis and many other cities. The figures as concerning Memphis show that the average family ends the year with a net saving of about $100, whether the income is $1,500 or $2,500.

In tests recorded among 28 families in Memphis earning between $1,500 and $2,500 per year, the report shows that this class of citizens expends more for food than any other class. Even those families making more than $2,500 per year, expended only $844 on an average for food, whereas those making between $1,500 and $2,500 expended an average of $1,072 per year.

An exceptional group of six families averaging four persons to the home, expended an average of $1,072 for food, having averaged $924.45 per year. Fifty families, averaging six members, and earning more than $2,500 per year, expended only an average of $250.20 per year for food.

Families earning between $2,500 and $3,500 per year show the greatest average saving for the year, the surplus in this group being $291.14. Of 12 Memphis families of four, having an income of $400 to $1,000, the surplus was $144. Of five families earning more than $2,500, three had surpluses averaging $217. Of 25 families earning between $1,500 and $2,500, 24 showed an average surplus of $103.50 and of 28 families earning between $1,000 and $1,500, 13 had a surplus average of $125.22.

Negro families in nearly all the groups show a deficit and food costs are nearly the same, on an average, as the white families.

Memphis, as an average, is about on a par with other cities of its size in the nation. Washington leads the list in the high cost of living.

Don't Spoil Your Hair by Washing It

When you wash your hair be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified coconut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.
